Ahil's Spark of Ingenuity

What looks like trash to most people is treasure to Ahil. Whether it's old broomsticks, plastic bottles, or discarded utensils, he has a gift for turning everyday waste into creative toys. His resourcefulness is just one reflection of the bright, inventive mind that was hidden behind years of hardship.

Ahil grew up living on the pavements of Mallapur with his parents and sibling in extremely poor conditions. His father works as an auto-rickshaw driver and his mother is a homemaker. Like many children in underserved communities, Ahil's early childhood was marked by neglect, hunger, and interrupted education.

Though initially enrolled in a local government school, Ahil often missed classes due to domestic responsibilities and lack of consistent care. His learning fell behind, and school became more of a formality than a place of growth.

That began to change when Ahil was welcomed into Soham School. With regular family counselling and a nurturing environment, he started attending school consistently. His teachers quickly recognised his natural curiosity and drive to learn.

Through his hard work and commitment, Ahil made incredible progress—and this year, he proudly stood third in his Grade IV class at Soham. He now attends school with joy and enthusiasm, and his infectious positivity even inspires children in his neighbourhood to follow his example and join Soham.

Ahil's dream is to become an Army officer—to serve and protect his nation with honour. With his determination, creativity, and the right support, we have no doubt that he will achieve great things.
